Les Oilettes

Abbey Slip and Quay. This pretty picture of old Penzance gives us one of the picturesque quarters (now fast disappearing) of the town. Chapel Street, Market Jew Street, and the Turnpike. Above a number of old houses, St. Mary's tower looks down protectingly, and in front of the houses, in the quaint Cornish manner, red geraniums grow happily in the open air.

Abbey Slip and Quay. This pretty glimpse of old Penzance gives an idea of the picturesque quarter lying between Market Jew Street and the harbour. Over a huddle of old houses, St. Mary's tower looks down protectingly, and in front of the houses, in the mild Cornish winters, red geraniums grow happily in the open air.
